

New theme. This is not fitness work and it is not a race. It is teaching them one pace and how to find it.

ON THE GROUND

- 10 cones, one loop about 25 by 12 metres
- 25 discs inside the loop
- Hands free

Set it up before the first group arrives and leave it for all three.

One loop about 70 metres round, everybody running the same way

0 to 2 Wake up game: follow the hand

- They jog anywhere inside the loop. Nobody stops for two minutes.
- Raise your hand and they speed up. Lower it and they slow down. Flat hand means jog.
- Take them up and down four or five times, and never all the way to a sprint.

2 to 8 Movement: the loop at talking pace

- All 25 run the loop the same way at once. Slower boys cut the corners inside.
- Teach the test first: "If you can tell me your name and your club while you run, that is the pace."
- Ninety seconds running, thirty seconds walking. Three goes.
- Run beside three different boys and ask them. Send anyone who cannot answer down a gear.

8 to 13 Body shape: the plank

- A disc each. New shape, so build it in front of them.
- 1. "Elbows under your shoulders, forearms flat on the ground."
- 2. "Legs straight out behind you, up on your toes."
- 3. "Straight from your head to your heels. Backside down."
- Fifteen seconds, rest, three times. Knees down for anyone who sags.

13 to 17 Challenge game: the two minute loop

- Two minutes of running, everybody counting his own laps.
- The group adds them up at the end and that number is the target for session 7.
- Nobody's own number is asked for out loud.

Coach one thing: Finding one pace and holding it.

- Boys who sprint the first lap and walk the third. That is the whole fault of this theme.
- A sagging back in the plank. Knees down instead.

Lashing rain. The plank becomes the sit, held for twenty seconds. The running is unchanged.
